EGAN, Missoula county, March L .- [Correondence of the Independent.]-In jusice to the Flathead country, which suffers erious drawbacks by the wide circulation of such alarming and entirely unfounded reports of Indian warfare as have recently been published, the writer will give a short description of the Indian tribe which inhab-

The Kootenal Indian tribe, or Sansa as they call themselves, came originally from Winchester, M. M. W. M. M. The Kootenal Indian tribe, or Sansa as Tobacco Plains, a country about eightyfive miles north of here. According to tradition this was the cradle of the race; here they remained until local disturbances caused the removal, at different times of clans, and they gradually drifted northward, until they claimed the entire country almost to Kicking Horse Pass, on the Canadian Pacific. At the time of the advent of the white man among them they had possession of the country reterred to, with the addition of Bonner's Ferry country on the Kootenai river, the Flathead lake country and a portion of the reservation belonging to and now occupied (ostensibly) by a small band under the control of Chief Aeneas. They are peculiarly brave and daring, and have known ages of continual war are with their northern Blackfoot neighbors, who, vastly greater in numbers, swarmed down on them from the mountain passes and at times fairly threatened their extermination. Often the tide of battle was in their favor, and the Blackfeet were pursued across the mountains, into their own wide prairies, According to the earliest Kootenai traditions these wars have periodically disturbed the friendly relations of the tribes, and although they generally held possession of their country against the Blackfeet it was often times at great sacrifice of life.

The worst aspect of the Kootenai Indian's dition this was the cradle of the race; here the tribes, and although they generally held possession of their country against the Blackfeet it was often times at great sacrifice of life.

The worst aspect of the Kootenai Indian's character, and in fact nearly all other Indians, is their belief in a duality of existence, one mortal and used in everyday life, the other possessing the attributes of spirit force and invulnerable. This works a great deal of harm to Indian tribes coming in contact with the whites, as they believing in the absolute impossibility of mortal triumph over the spirit force, are eager for a contest in which they can reap all the glory of war without danger to themselves. This supposed immunity from danger with increased power of lighting injury on the foe is particularly fascinating to a young warrior who has never tried his "medicine," and is anxious to verify the belief of an ignorant fatalism. This superstition was the cause of the late trouble with the Crows, whom Sword Bearer, "invincible," narangued until slarge number of the young braves started on the war path. Happily, in this case, Sword Bearer was soon killed, and his followers, concluding that their spirits were weak, succumbed to the military.

Strange as it may seem nothing can overcome this superstition. Their reasoning is unanswerable; if the person survives, his spirit took possession of the bones and tissue, endowing them with its own indestructible nature; but if death was his portion, the spirit, being angry, had forsaken the house of clay and the missile or knife found a mortal victim. Reason is powerless against such arbitrary conclusions. This belief, in which the Kootenais are particularly strong, has developed in them an utter indifference to death.

This album is unsurpassed for durability, capacity and beauty, and embodies in itself found a mortal victim. Reason is power in the profit of the profit of the person survives, his spirit book possession of the bones and tissue, endowing them with its own indeadness of capacity and the missile or knife found a mor that it either finds vent in stealthy murder or open warfare. This is practically true of nearly all the western Indians. However the Kootenais have been so isolated from the whites in the past that the opportunity of widespread carnage was hardly possible, and they confined themselves to occasional robbery and murder.

As regards the immediate danger of the Flathead country from the ravages of the small remnant of Kootenais bordering here there is no occasion for alarm—the whites outnumbering them ten to one, and being far better armed than the savages. The entire number of the Kootenai warriors will not exceed 255, and these are scattered over a country measuring from one extreme to the other over 300 miles and settled throughout with a sufficient number of whites to cope with them under anything like favorable circumstances.

Taken as a whole, they are very poorly armed, their lizy habits and gambling propensities keeping them too poor to afford good guns.

The feeling among the Indians at present armed, their lazy habits and gambling propensities keeping them too poor to afford good guns.

The feeling among the Indians at present its anything but belilgerent. The example that was made of the two murderers a year ago had a very salutary effect on the entire tribe. The aggressive and at times openly insulting demeanor of the young braves before that time has since changed to one of almost cur-like submission.

Knowing nearly every Indian in the Kootenai tribe and speaking the language thoroughly, the writer feels warranted in saying that there is no daager of an outbreak or of any organized disturbance. The only danger to the community is that ever present, inevitable one, which all places similarly situated suffer—the evils of the whiskey traffic and the lawlessness of reckless young indians. Nor indeed can this valley ever expect to be free from these evils as long as the Indians have free access to our country and wander wherever a fickle fancy prompts.

There is and has been urgent need of a military force here since the white settlers and their families first immigrated to this lovely valley.

In perusing the history of Indian affairs

ovely valley.

In perusing the history of Indian affairs for the last generation, a westerner cannot help but feel a deep regret that the misguided sentiments of eastern people have shaped a policy which has been injurious to the best interests of the indians, destructive to the rights of the white man and written in the blood of our best and bravest planeers.

But even to our unassisted condition the future has in store some hope.

When the forests adjacent shall have been divested of all game, as they are fast becoming, and our rivers and streams are no longer filled with abundance of trout, then the "noble red man" will either seek new fields or become, by his own request, a recipient of Uncle Sam's bounty. The aborigines cannot subsist on a vegetarian diet; their savage nature craves animal food, and failing to obtain this the dusky warrior, idealized by Cooper, sinks to the abject level of the California Digger. HOME TESTIMONY.

HELENA, Oct. 7, 1887. I was suffering from an unusually bad cough, my lungs were sore and congested, and I consulted one of the best physicians in Helena, whose prescriptions failed to relieve me. I became alarmed, and at the suggestion of a friend purchased a bottle of Acker's English Remedy for coughs, and after taking it according to directions was completely cured. I therefore cheerfully recommend it.

A New Labor Organization A branch of a labor organization known as the Brotherhood of the Union of the Continent of America is soon to be established in this city. In its circular setting forth the principles and objects of the so-ciety, the following appears: "The Brothciety, the following appears: "The Brotherhood of the Union is a school of labor, where the equity that should rule the buyer and the selling of the products of toil is taught—such equitable distribution as may secure comfort, if not affluance, to all; that wrong and want shall be banished from the land and every son and daughter of earth be secure in possessing the reward of their toil—the possessors of free and happy homes.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that, too, by a lady in this counmade and that, too, by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at R. S. Hale & Co's. drug store.

The Verdict Unanimous.
W. D. Suit, druggist, Bippus, Ind., testithe very best remedy. Every bottle sold the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of ten years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist. Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my twenty years' experience, is electric bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that electric bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at R. S. "I have used St. Patrick's Pills," says Mr. J. Reynolds, of Mayfield, Ky., "and pronounce them superior to any I have ever before used. I do not hesitate to recommend them, knowing them to be reliable." They are thorough, yet gentle in their action and leave the system in splendid condition. But while it relieves constipation in common with dyspepsia and liver complaint—associate evils pepsia and liver complaint—associate evils—the griping and abdominal disturbance produced by drastic purgatives never precede its operation. Its thoroughness is unmarred by violence, the chief characteristic of most laxatives, and one that is highly prejudicial to both bowels and stomach. It is only by invigorating the intestinal canal, and thus fitting it to perform its office as a natural sluice for the effete matter of the system, that its regularity can be perpetuated. To weaken by strenching is to insure its relapse into disorder. This the Bitters never does. Chils and fever, nervousness, kidney complaints yield to the Bitters, and appetite and sleep are improved by it.
